Ashe, Thomas Remember Ashe. By Phil O'Neill. A single leaf broadside, printed on one side with four verses. 21 x 13.5cm. Undated circa 1917. In very good condition. Thomas Ashe (1885-1917), Republican, was born at Kinard, Lispole, near Dingle, Co. Kerry, the fourth son in a family of seven boys and three girls born to Gregory Ashe, farmer, and his wife Ellen (née Hanafin). He was educated at Ardmore School and De La Salle Training College, Waterford. After a brief spell teaching at Minard Castle, Co. Kerry, he became a master at Corduff national school near Lusk, Co. Dublin. Active in the Gaelic League and the Irish Volunteers, he supported James Larkin during the Lock-Out in 1913 and was also a close friend of Seán O'Casey. During the Easter Rising he led local Volunteers at Ashbourne, Co. Meath. Court-Martialed for his role, he was sentenced to life imprisonment. Following the General Amnesty of 1917 he was released and became a leading republican propagandist. He campaigned for De Valera in the East Clare by-election, and was arrested in August and charged with inciting the civil population for which he was sentenced to two years imprisonment. After failing to secure political status for Sinn Féin prisoners in Mountjoy, he organised a hunger-strike and died on 25th September while being forcibly fed

De Valera, Eamon Daily Bulletin. No. 165. Friday, April 13th 1923. President's Address to the Army. With: De Valera's Declaration of Independence. As told by him to a Representative of the American Press on May 5th, 1918. Now given in the form of verse for the first time. Single folio sheet, printed one side only in brown ink, with portrait sketch. N.p., anti-Treaty. Single cyclostyled sheet, printed one side only. Folio. Rare. (2)The Bulletin contains De Valera's well-known message on the death of Liam Lynch, military commander of the anti-Treaty forces, urging the Soldiers of the Republic to renew their pledges of devotion. "You have to fling yourselves across the path of the stampede of a nation. But it is better to die nobly, as your chief has died, than to live a slave". In spite of this ringing message, Lynch's death marked the effective end of the Civil War. Republican forces were ordered to cease offensive action two weeks later, and to dump their arms the following month. It is highly significant that in this document, and in the Republican Cease Fire Order issued on 27 April 1923, de Valera referred to himself as President of the Republic. This title derived from the reconvening of the Second Dail Eireann on 25 October 1922, and the appointment by de Valera of a Council of State and a Cabinet to contest the legitimacy of the Free State.

De Valera, Eamon. Taoiseach's Broadcast to the Nation. Reprinted from "The Irish Press", Thursday 17th May 1945. Dublin, 1945. pp. 8. Quarto, with reproduced photograph of De Valera at the microphone. V.g. Dev's celebrated reply to Churchill's complaint about Irish neutrality during the War - in terms of popular support, perhaps his finest hour. With: A copy of Eamon De Valera's states his Case [1918]. The 'Factionist'. The Smallest Paper in the World. Vol. 1 No. 24, Thursday 12 July 1917. Leaflet printed in small type on both sides (190 x 130mm). No publisher credited, one of a series issued during De Valera's successful campaign for Sinn Fein in the East Clare by-election. This issue may be the last, as it includes the results of the election count (voting was on 10 July), with some reflections on the campaign and the humiliation of the Irish Party. A very scarce item, relating to one of the most important of Irish by-elections. With: A National Policy outlined by Eamon De Valera. (4)

De Valera, Eamon A Proclamation to the People of Ireland. Broadside, single sheet, 33 x 20cm, printed one side only. Dated Dublin, October 10th, 1921. On laid and watermarked paper. Important and very rare. This is a document of historic significance and prophetic quality, dated the day before the Treaty talks were to open in London. It appeals for calm and unity during the talks, and warns against 'foolish hopes' of an easy settlement. Addressed to 'Fellow Citizens', the document begins by stressing the non-negotiable nature of the Irish claim to nationhood. "The only peace that, in the very nature of things, can end this struggle will be a peace consistent with the Nation's right and guaranteeing a freedom worthy of the sufferings endured to secure it. Such a peace will not be easy to obtain. The claim that conflicts with Ireland's right has been ruthlessly persisted in through centuries of blood. It seems unlikely that this claim will be abandoned now. By an heroic endurance of suffering, Ireland has gained the position she holds. Were the prospect of further horrors or further sacrifices to cause her to quail or falter for a moment, all would again be lost. The threats that could force surrender in one vital particular would be relied on to force surrender in another and another till all were gone. The power against us will use every artifice it knows in the hope of dispiriting, dividing, weakening us. We must all beware. The unity that is essential will best be maintained by an unwavering faith in those who have been deputed to act in the Nation's behalf, and a confidence manifesting itself as hitherto in eloquent discipline. For this I appeal". (Signed) EAMON DE VALERA at end of document. This document forms part of a carefully co-ordinated strategy by De Valera and the Dail Cabinet. On 7 October the Irish plenipotentiaries, Arthur Griffith, Michael Collins, Robert Barton, Eamon Duggan and Gavan Duffy, were given their credentials and instructions; on 8 October they sailed for England; on 10 October this Proclamation was issued to the people of Ireland ('Fellow Citizens') and, at the same time, Erskine Childers and John Chartres, secretaries to the delegation, confirmed the procedures for the conference with their English counterparts; on 11 October 1921 the first Plenary Conference took place at 10 Downing Street. We can find few references to this document in the standard works on the period, although it clearly has an important bearing on the question of De Valera's approach to the talks. It is quoted in part in Macardle, but is not mentioned in Pakenham, Longford & O'Neill, Coogan ('De Valera') or Fanning ('Documents on Irish Foreign Policy 1919-22'). It is not in Carty, and is evidently exceedingly rare.

Dillon, John The Irish Elections, 1921. The Nationalist Position. Statement by Mr. John Dillon. Pamphlet, 12 pp. Announcing Dillon's decision not to contest the elections, as "the present circumstances of Ireland and the policy and proceedings of the British Government for the past three years make it practically impossible for any Nationalist Irishman to fight Sinn Féin at this election". With: Irish National Federation of America, 47 West Forty-Second St. Dillon's Speech. Ireland's Position on the Queen's Jubilee. Circa 1897. Leaflet (15 x 22.5cm), printed both sides. With: DILLON, John. Facts for Mr. Parnell's Bill: A Speech Delivered in the House of Commons, on 21st September, 1886. London, The Irish Press Agency, 1886. 1st edition. pp. 27. Stapled wrappers. Staples rusty, foxing to prelims, otherwise v.g. Very good. Scarce. With: Dillon's Speech. Ireland's Position on the Queen's Jubilee. Irish National Federation of America. Single octavo sheet, printed on both sides. (4) John Dillon was the last Chairman of the Irish Party, and the last ex- Parnellite active in Irish politics. A supporter of Michael Davitt and the Land League, he supported the Home Rule Bill of 1912, opposed conscription, and condemned the 1916 executions in the strongest terms ("You have let Hell loose in Ireland", he wrote to Lloyd George). He was committed to achieving Home Rule by constitutional means, but found his position undermined by British policy in Ireland. In March 1918 he succeeded John Redmond as Irish Party leader, but in the General Election of that year his party was wiped out by Sinn Féin, and he lost his own seat in Mayo to Eamon de Valera. The present pamphlet is effectively his farewell to public life.

Etchingam, Sean - Prison Letter: Three page autograph letter signed, on standard prison letter form, from Jack (Sean) Etchingam in Lewes Prison, dated 21.3.1917, to 'My dear Martin'. Marked 'Special' (by censor). Interesting letter, referring to the purchase of a library [the Etchingam family was associated with the book trade], "I spoke to De Valera re: the rare mathematical books. He would be delighted to have them kept for him"; also the death of an old friend, Ryan. "Kindly direct Collins to assure Mrs. Ryan of my deep regret." [presumably the reference is to Michael Collins, recently released, and at that time Secretary of the Volunteers' Dependants Fund]; also some comments on the prison system, war news, a poetry writing group in prison, Harry Boland, etc. Sean Etchingam was a Captain in the Wexford Volunteers, which took over much of North Wexford in 1916. They agreed to surrender only after Etchingam received a direct order from Pearse at the end of the fighting in Dublin. In 1921 he was appointed Fisheries Minister by the Second Dáil. Folds strengthened with tape, otherwise very good.

Hunger Strike: Daily Sheet, Sinn Féin Headquarters, collection of 8 issues, nos. 4, 6, 10, 12, 18, 24, 27, 44 (last issue). 29 Oct. 1923 - 1 Jan. 1924. Each a single printed sheet, sizes vary, first three printed one side only, others printed both sides. (8) Although De Valera ordered Republicans to dump their arms in April 1923, hundreds of Republican prisoners were still detained in poor conditions through the summer and autumn. In October 1923, over 400 men in Mountjoy Jail went on hunger strike seeking unconditional release. Prisoners in other jails (including women) joined the strike, and it became a major national confrontation. The Free State Government refused to yield, and two men died before the strike was called off after 41 days (after an appeal by Cardinal Logue). These daily bulletins are very rare. They include brief biographies of men thought to be close to death, including Ernie O'Malley and Brian O'Higgins. No. 24 includes news of the first death (Denis Barry of Cork). No. 27 carries the news of the end of the strike; also the second death (Andy O'Sullivan of Mallow). The final issue includes a reassessment of Republican policy. "The cessation of warfare does not mean acceptance of the Free State. Though armed resistance was, and is, constitutional, it is no longer expedient. It has been definitely abandoned, and passive non-military resistance takes its place".

O'Brien (sentenced to be hanged for participation in the Fenian insurrection), O'Donovan Rossa, Patrick Ford (editor, Irish World, New York), John Devoy (another noted conspirator), Augustus M. Costelloe (the leader of the Irish American 'invasion' of Ireland during the Fenian insurrection); also many writers, artists, ecclesiastics and others. "From several of these it would be impossible to obtain the necessary particulars, but as I have always taken an interest in Irish biography, and know the sources ... I can supply you with brief sketches of those who do not respond to your invitation". The Irish Literary Society of London was founded in 1892 by a group including W.B. Yeats and D. O'Donoghue. Michael MacDonagh (1862-1946) was an active member and editor of the Society's quarterly Gazette. Born in Limerick. he was a journalist with the Freeman's Journal and later Parliamentary correspondent for the London Times. His published works include 'Irish Graves in England', 'The Viceroy's Postbag', 'The Irish At the Front' and biographies of Daniel O'Connell and Bishop Doyle ('J.K.L.'). O'Flanagan, Fr. Michael: Fr. Michael O'Flanagan. Sceilg's Graveside Oration, August 10 1942, with a footnote. 4 pp. With portrait of O'Flanagan. With: By What Authority? By Proinnsias Ó Gallchobhair. With: The Bishops' Pastoral. A Prisoner's Letter to His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin. Proinnsias Ó Gallchobhair questions the Bishops' decision to refuse the Sacraments to persons who refused to renounce their membership of the I.R.A. Some foxing. With: Two Poems of Triumph of Death. By Alice Furlong and Alice Milligan. All very good. (4). Fr. O'Flanagan was an active supporter of the independence movement from the early days of Sinn Féin, and played a large part in the crucial election campaign of 1918. He remained with the purists after the Treaty, and led the opposition at the Sinn Féin Ardfeis of 1925 to De Valera's proposal for a flexible approach to the Oath. He was often in trouble with his religious superiors, and his priestly functions were suspended for a time. His other activities included the publication of John O'Donovan's Ordnance Survey Letters. This pamphlet by Sceilg, (J.J. O'Kelly), his friend for over forty years, makes special mention of his time in America and Australia and of his suspension by the Church authorities.

Ó Ceallaigh, Seán - J. J. O'Kelly - Sceilg: The Claim of the Irish Republic. Statement submitted to Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, Washington, signed by Ó Ceallaigh as Ceann Comhairle of Dáil Éireann. No publisher. 1928, pp. 32. Stapled wrappers. Foxing to covers. With: A Rebel Churchman. Very Rev. Canon William O'Kennedy [President of St. Flannan's College, and Treasurer of the Dail Loan for East Clare], Foreword by Mons. M. Hamilton. Tralee, 1962. 16 pp. Illustrated wrappers. With: Imaginary Happenings. Published by Brian O'Higgins at The Irish Book Bureau, 1940. With: The Republic of Ireland Addresses His Holiness, The Pope. Issued by Sinn Féin Standing Committee, 1929. (4) The Claim of the Irish Republic statement was signed by Sean Ua Ceallaigh, J.J. O'Kelly's, pen name, Sceilg (1872-1957). He signed as Chairman of Dáil Éireann. This Dail Éireann was the illegal Second Dail Eireann reconvened by de Valera in 1922 and abandoned by him in 1927 after he had founded the Fianna Fail Party. Those who remained in this Dail Eireann and in the Sinn Féin Party after the departure of de Valera attempted to justify the all-Ireland republican policy of 1919 against the claims of both the Free State and British governments. This appeal to Frank B. Kellogg, the American Secretary of State, was part of that policy. Similar statements were presented to Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of England, in August 1929 and to the Pope in December 1929. Finally, in 1938 this body of Dail Éireann delegated its authority to the Army Council of the IRA. This statement, therefore, provides a rare insight into a particular republican ideology.

Ó Cathasaigh, Sean. Songs of the Wren - Humorous and Sentimental - New Series No I. Dublin, Fergus O'Connor, circa 1918. Octavo. 8 pp. Original printed wrappers. Some browning to extremities but otherwise a very good copy of this rare early work by a leading Irish dramatist of the 20th Century. Sean O'Casey (1880-1964), playwright, born in Dublin into a working class family and christened John Casey. His father's death in 1886 plunged the family into poverty. Self-educated, he was deeply involved in the Labour Movement and took part in the 'Lock-Out' strike of 1913. He was secretary of the Irish Citizen Army under James Connolly, but left when it moved closer to a Republican position. Encouraged by Lady Gregory, he began to submit plays to the Abbey Theatre; and after some years success came with the production of 'The Shadow of a Gunman' (1923), which marked him as the new great voice of Irish theatre. In 1926 he left for London to become a full time writer. His next play 'The Silver Tassie' was rejected by the Abbey. This was a bitter blow to O'Casey and estranged him from the directors.

Charles II: Proclamation. At the Court at Whitehall, this tenth of November, 1682 : Present, the Kings most excellent Majesty, His Highness Prince Rupert, Lord Chancellor, Lord Privy Seal ... Duke of Ormond ... Earl of Conway ... Mr. Godolphin. For the preventing tumultuous disorders which may happen hereafter upon pretence of assembling to make bonfires and public fire-works. Signed by Francis Gwyn. London, Printed by the Assigns of John Bill deceas'd: and by Henry Hills, and Thomas Newcomb, Printers to the Kings most excellent Majesty, 1682. Broadside, 27.5 x 35.5cm. V.g. Francis Gwyn, (1648?-1734), politician, son and heir of Edward Gwyn of Llansannor, Glamorganshire, who married Eleanor, youngest daughter of Sir Francis Popham of Littlecott, Wiltshire, was born at Combe Florey in Somersetshire about 1648. He was trained for the profession of the law, but being possessed of ample means soon showed a preference for politics. On a by-election in February 1673 he was returned for Chippenham. After the dissolution in January 1679 he remained outside the house discharging his official duties, but in 1685 was elected for Cardiff. In return for the sum of 2,500l. Sir Robert Southwell vacated for Gwyn the post of clerk of the council, and he was sworn in on 5 Dec. 1679, holding the office until January 1685. Until the death of Charles II he was a groom of the bedchamber, and he was twice under-secretary of state, from February 1681 to January 1683, under his cousin, Edward, Earl of Conway, and from Christmas 1688 to Michaelmas 1689.

Gogarty, Oliver St. John, et al. Secret Springs of Dublin Song. Dublin: The Talbot Press. London: Fisher Unwin, 1918. First edition. Cloth. Edition limited to 500 numbered copies (No. 403). Untrimmed. Wear to heel of spine. Vg. The contributors to this book of parodies have never been fully elucidated. Gogarty certainly was one; others may include Susan Mitchell and George Russell (AE). Those parodied include virtually all the Irish poets of the time, notably Yeats. Gogarty began his literary life by sharing a tower in Sandymount with James Joyce, and featured thereafter in 'Ulysses' as the model for Buck Mulligan. His own writing never quite lived up to that connection, but his memoirs and the best of his poems remain significant and readable.

Yeats, W.B. On the Boiler. Dublin, Cuala Press, (1939). Crown quarto. Original grey green wrappers, titles to cover in black, design by Jack B. Yeats in black of McCoy, the mad ship's carpenter, leaf of publisher's advertisements at back. Original green-grey wrappers. First trade edition, following the unprocurable privately printed edition published a year earlier in Dundrum. Browning to cover, small nick to head of spine. Fine. Only four copies of the Dundrum edition were issued when it was decided to reprint the book, all of which now reside in institutions. Published just before Yeats's death in January 1939, On the Boiler contains several essays which illuminate some of Yeats's own reactionary and often controversial political views. It was published by the Cuala Press, one half of the Cuala Industries and a co-operative business run by Yeats's sisters Lily and Elizabeth. Cuala Industries was founded with the aim of reviving the craft of book printing in Ireland and "to give work to Irish girls" (McMurtrie, p. 472). Wade 202
